Is the patient interested in undergoing Molecular Testing related to cancer, at possibly no cost to the patient? Yes No

Molecular Testing—or “tumor genomic profiling”—is a form of testing that classifies tumors based on genetic make-up to help diagnose and treat cancer. Using a blood test or biopsy, this testing examines the DNA of cancer cells, looking for genetic mutations that have been acquired by these cells. Every tumor is unique to the patient therefore it is important to understand the unique characteristics of your type of cancer. Molecular testing does this.
